

Programs Available to Employers

TRANSITIONAL EMPLOYMENT

Job placements are arranged in the community and supported by The Meeting Place Clubhouse. Supports include job specific training, free absentee coverage, and job coaches. Positions are part time and entry level. Employees rotate every 6-9 months and The Meeting Place provides training for new employees.

SUPPORTED EMPLOYMENT

Employees are supported by the employment specialists who provide a tailored package of assistance. A feature of supported employment may include on-the-job support. Employment staff are covered under their own insurance and liability

SEASONAL/TEMPORARY EMPLOYMENT

Employers often have time limited tasks and need short term employees. It is possible to find employees willing to accept temporary work to meet the specific needs of the employer. A job coach can bring a single individual or a small group out to complete most entry level projects.

Hiring People with a Mental Illness: When a Good Deed is a Good Deal

Work is restorative and empowering. As a result, employees benefit from being held to the same standards of productivity and conduct as any other employee.

Employer's Common Concerns

Will our image suffer?

Mental illness doesn't effect IQ. Uniforms, safety equipment and grooming requirements are the same for all employees.

Do I have to worry about someone becoming unstable?

Typically, individuals recommended for employment are invested in wellness and are ready to return to work.

Is there a greater liability risk?

Employee's skills are tailored to the job in order to address safety and liability issues and they typically have their own insurance.

Will the employee require extra supervision?

In most cases, employees are able to work independently. Where needed, on the job supports are built in to eliminate the need for extra supervision.

“Working has allowed me to feel
I am of value and an asset.
Transitional Employment has given me the opportunity to feel like a contributing member of society once again.”
